in most cases the drag to close handle seems to be more suitable.

From your experience, under what kind of circumstances is the takeover idiom preferred?

I think a takeover feels more natural when:

- The modal's task will take a longer time
- The modal contains more information
- The modal's internal UI layout fills more space

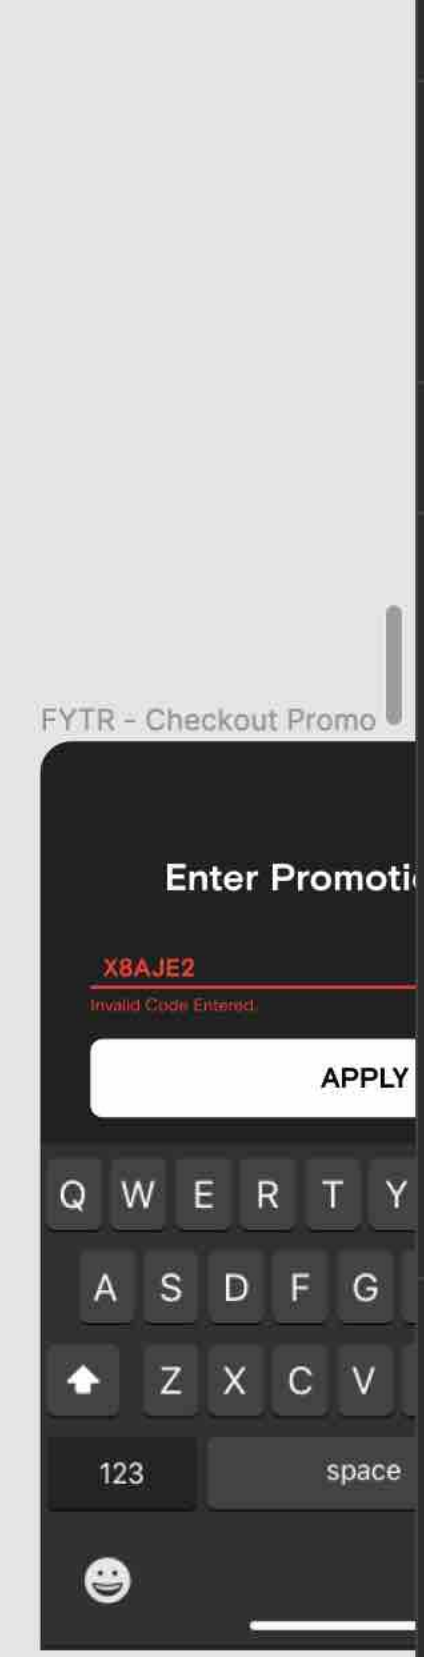

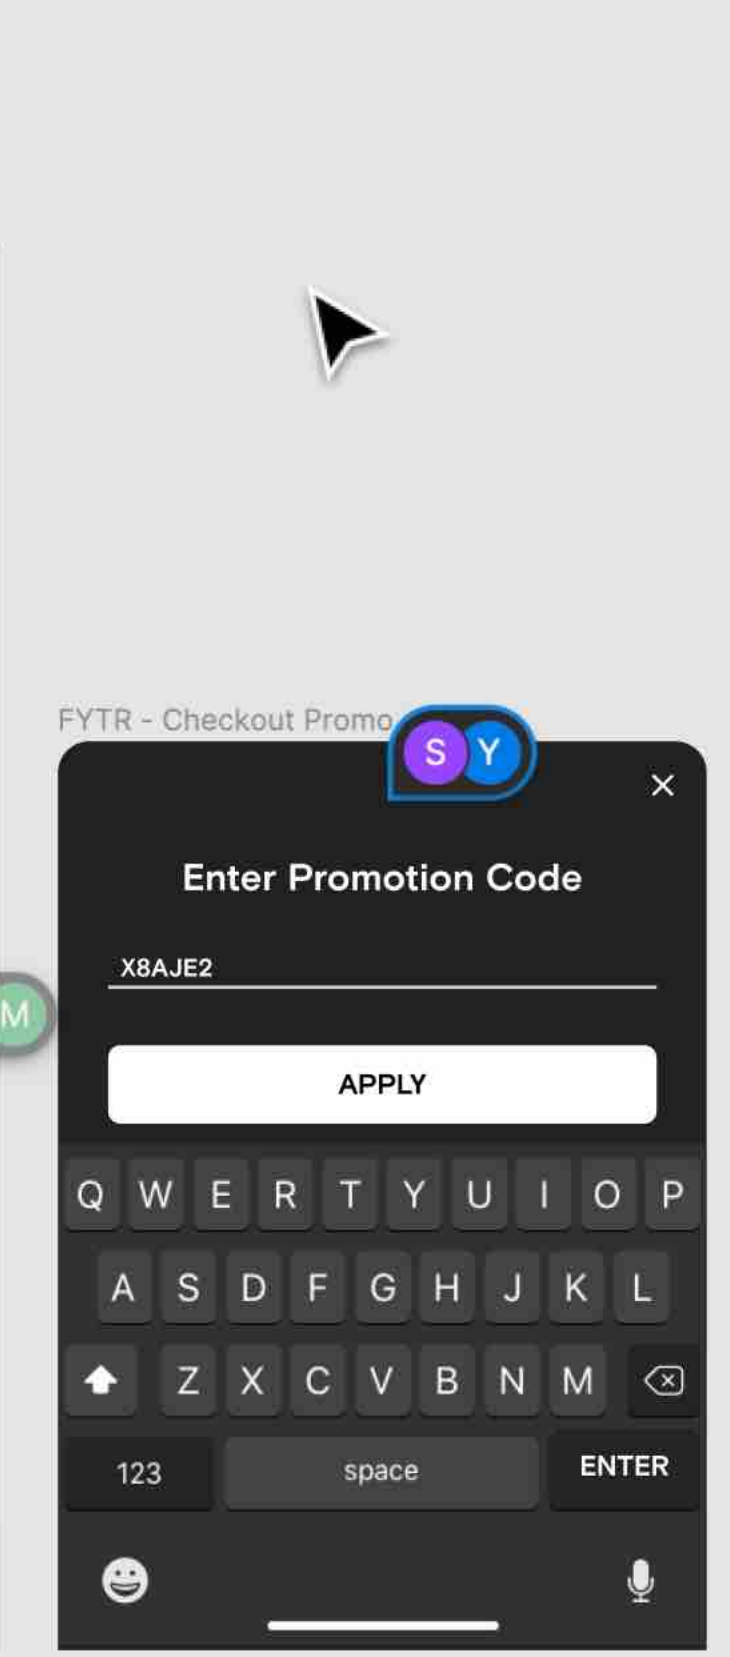

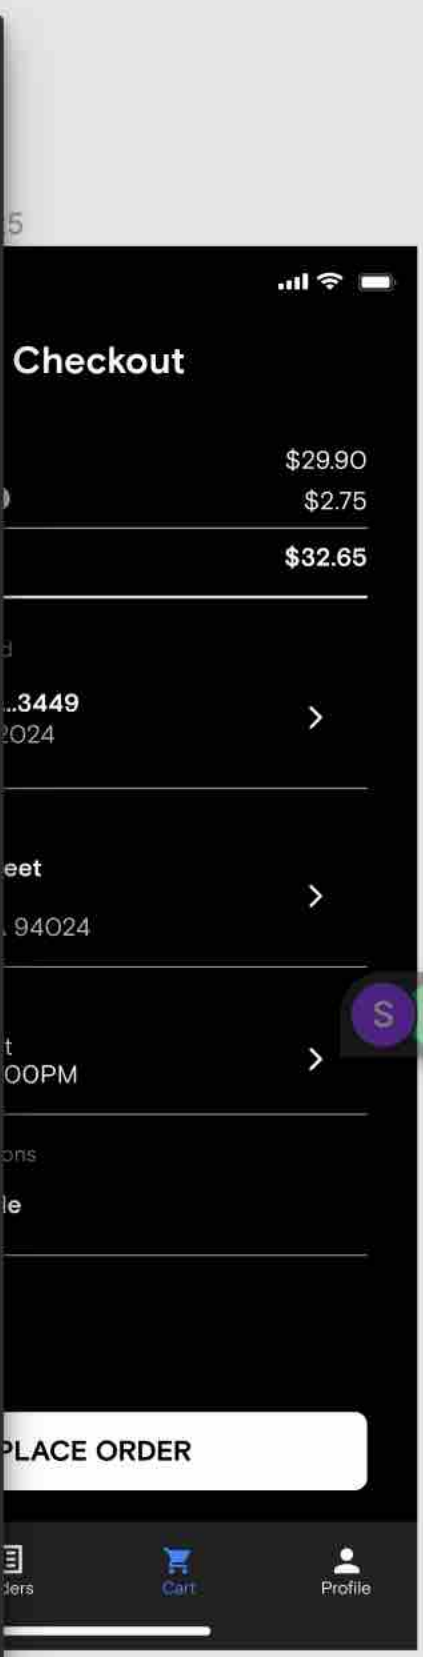

If we want to tell the user that the modal is an important place where they should expect to linger and think about an involved set of tasks, then we'd go with a takeover. For a quick "aside", like typing in a promo code, we'd go with a popover.

That's my two cents. :)
